The green papaya
is a native of the South Pacific islands.
The green papaya possesses a split personality.
Sometimes a vegetable,
sometimes a fruit.
When a vegetable, its oblong shape
is the color of soft mint green.
When a fruit, it's the color of sunsets.
Its small black seeds are ground and used as spice.
Resting comfortably under an umbrella of leaves, this tasty delicacy adds a special touch to Siam cuisine.

HONG KONG CLUB
FOR MEN ONLY

NEVER has a group been so easy to join since the Bengal Lancers. Never has a group's mission been so pure and unsaturated since the Baker Street Irregulars.

The bright idea for this club came from a group of businessmen with a common problem . . . TOO HIGH A CHOLESTEROL COUNT AND TOO GREAT A LOVE FOR HOLLANDAISE. So we marched off to Trader Vic with our problem.

"Can you," we asked, "duplicate Absalone Meuniere, Trader Vic, without losing any a flavor bud yet knock out the cholesterol?" "Can you do your famous Salmon Hollandaise with all the flavor and half the fat?" "Can you devise a group of luncheon ideas that favor fish and fruit and lean meat yet not sound or taste like a health counter?"

"Sure," he yelled—"I'll invent a whole new way to eat."

So he invented poly-unsaturated mayonnaise, hollandaise and tartar sauce. He has created dishes like Fishermen's Spaghetti, Barbecued Tenderloin of Beef, Bay Scallops Meuniere and Oysters San Juan—a whole special way to lunch just for us.

So now our small group brazenly enjoys the fruits of Trader Vic's culinary skill without worrying about extra cholesterol intake. And we find we have a lot of converts, even those who don't have to worry about their "pipes" have discovered it is good sense and good insurance to lunch this way.

Try it, my friends. The taste runs as high as the fat runs low.

General Richardson

Although certain items shown on General Richardson's special diet may be duplicated on the regular menu, they are not the same. Everything served on this menu is cooked separately under Trader Vic's supervision to reduce or eliminate saturated fats.
